LIPPITT'S SPECIFIC. For the Cure of Dysentery, Diarrhaa, and Summer Complaints. In presenting this justly celebrated Medicine to the public, we make no rash assertions of its efficacy, nor is any hope neld out to the afflicted which facts do not warrant. This remedy having been, for years, used in this place, for the cure of the above diseases and those appertaining to the character of dissension among those who in common same class, the proprietor has been induced to offer it on a support the Administratron and uphold the avowed more extensive scale, with a view to lessen the amount of human suffering. I have never known it to fail when the directions have been strictly adhered to.

Extract of a letter received from S. J. Carroll.

BALTIMORE, January 10th, 1851. BALTIMORE, January 10th, 1851.

WM. H. LIPPITT, Esq.,—Dear Sir:—I have no hesitation in saying that your Specific is one of the best Medicines extant for Dysentery, Diarrhaa, &c. You possibly may recollect my case; if it has escaped your memory I will give you briefly the facts. I had tried every thing that I had seen used, but with little success. And after using enough to start twenty-five Homeopathic M. D.'s, I began to despair, when you kindly offered me your invaluable Medicine, which cared me effectually.

Yours truly,

its efficacy.

From the Washington Sentinel. Jefferson Davis, Esq.

We lay these communications before our readers and invite special attention to them: WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 8, 1853.

B. Tucker, Esq:
My Dear Sir:—Thanking you for your correction of a misrepresentation of my position towards Messrs.
Bronson and O'Conner of New York, which appeared in this morning's "Sentinel," yet I cannot but apprehend that the manner in which the correction is made may lead to further misapprehension. The present confusion in the use of old names, and the difficulty of reconciling present positions with old opinions, render it necessary to be very precise in the use of terms. I do not consider those who stand firmly on the latform of the Democratic convention of 1852, to be free-soilers, though they be opposed to the diatinguished democrat named by you in the article referred to. As the most certain mode of showing to you my position in relation to the New York controversy, I handed to you the duplicate of a private letter I had written to a friend in New York; and though not intended for publication, I now send you a copy of that letter, by which you may best be able to show my position in reference to the quarrel of the Democratic family of New York, as long as it retains the principles of our party. If, in the progress of the campaign either division should array itself on the the agitators of questions which the Democratic party is pledged in all time to prevent from revival, then I shall look upon them as foes of the Democ acy and disturbers of that peace and fraternity essential to our Union, and as such, to be opposed by all who entertain the views and are influenced by the

The good, kind-hearted souls who have been telling the people all along how much ground the Administration has lost, and to what an amazing extent the Democracy has been split up by the intrigues of the great disappointed, seem not a little puzzled, disgruntled and put out by the result of all the recent elections, which has been as one-sided as the handle of a jug. The party which supports the President has been even more successful this Fall than he himself was last. So, upon the whole, all the discussion about divisions and all that, amounts to nothing; and we are sick of fatiguing our readders with it any longer. The meeting of Congress - the doctrines and recommendations of the message and accompanying documents-their reception by the people, and the subsequent action of Congress upon them :- these, and these alone, can fairly test the strength and popularity of the new Administration; and we may depend upon it, that the long Congress of '53-4, will be among the most stirring and important in the annals of the National Legislature. Among other things, we will have the Paeific Railroad-the Tariff reduction-the surplus revenue, and a host of equally important questions.

Col. Davis' Letter-The Policy of the Administration. WASHINGTON, October 14th, 1853.

Correspondence.

The rumor that the Secretary of War differed for some days, reached its climax here, when it was should at this moment, write a letter on the subconcisest and clearest defence of the policy of the worth any hundred columns which have been written on the subject. It will be read with approbation from Maine to Texas, and cannot fail to suffee any fair man or sensible politician.

That it would have been " hollow and dishonora ble" to have united with men in the hour of danger and not to recognize them after victory, is a proposition, at the very statement of converse of which impulses would be startled. That, after the "general amnesty" at Baltimore and the acquiescence of men of extreme and all shades of opinion in the platform there laid down, and after the solemn compact there made, to put an end to the agitation of all disturbing questions, and especially after the entire good faith of all parties had been made manifest by an union in the election of Gen. Pierce, that the Administration should then fail to recognize the Democratic party as a unit, would have been a gross fraud. From an honorable determination to adhere to these pledges, springs necessarily the policy of a fair distribution of governmental patronage to all sections of the party, without reference to former opinions or to which was the first to renounce objectionable doctrines. And from this fixed purpose must equally follow, a condemnation of those who violate the "Platform" by renewing agitation. That this policy is the dictate of fairness and common sense must be plain to every one, and that it will be

When the proposition was made in 1849 to unite position to it that such an union would tincture the party with free-soilism.

To this it was replied, by those who were possessed of more foresight, that the Democratic party sagacity of this policy is now apparent in entire success. The formidable phalanx which supported Van Buren and the Buffalo platform are now annihilated. dorsed the entire Baltimore platform, fugitive slave law and all. This endorsement is said to be insincere, and yet no proof is given of a want of good faith. The charge is made but on suspicion, when, on the contrary, their adherence to the platform and its candidates successfully in the Presidential election, and their present attitude, give abundant proof of its falsity. Yet the men who made this charge are at this moment agitating questions which they had agreed to consider settled, and they are alone in it, except, indeed, Garrison and his associates .-Whilst the entire South, as the late elections show, are satisfied and quiet upon the subject of slavery, about it. The fact is as apparent as is the want of good taste and honesty in their procedure, that the real cause of their clamors exists in disappointed ambition and an insatiate appetite for the lucre of

> Monetary Affairs, &c. PORTSMOUTH, (England,) Sept. 30, 1853. To the Editor of the Union :

Monetary affairs, which in England are the barometrical means of judging of political, are becoming very unsettled, chiefly owing to the eastern question. The Times has been writing up the doctrine of letting Turkey fight out the battle herselt single-handed : but all the arguments she has been floundering about have gone to prove the very thing she wanted not prove-something like the Austrian protest in the Koszta affair; and the conviction appears to be general, that if war does grow out of this question, England is bound in honor to support Turkey by force of tual collision and the clash of weapons. Austria will be gained over to Russia by the personal influence of he Emperor Nicholas over Joseph. This is as all but one opinion in England in regard to the course of which is decidedly approbatory. The hatred of Austria in this country is equally as great as in America day gaining more power here. The House of Lords dare not act against the known wishes of the people. "At twelve o'clock the night before this review, a man deeply disguised in furs, presented himself at the office of the grand chamberlain of the imperial residence, and demanded to see the Emperor. He was at once informed that the Emperor had retired for the night, and that he could not be seen by anybody. The man took the chamberlain aside, and told him that he must see the Emperor, that it was grown weed to fall down and rot the bolls; and there a matter of the greatest importance, a matter even of life and death; and after much expostulation, he gained an interview. The visitor was one of the nobles engaged in the conspiracy, whose conscience was too active, and who had determined to save the life of his sovereign. He revealed the entire plot to the Emperor, giving him such proofs as satisfied him of the entire truth of his statements. The Emperor thanked him, promised him to remember him in the future for his devotion, and gave him directions how to avoid suspicion of having betrayed his fellow-conspirators. "The Emperor then retired again to rest. The next morning he sent for a few of the principal officers who were to be in command at the review that day, and who he knew were fast friends of his .-Quietly and without emotion, he revealed to these astonished men, the cold blooded plot which had been concocted against him, and the terrible vengeance which he intended to wreak. "Mary," said George, " next summer I will not have a garden. Our pretty tree is dying, and I won't have another tree as long as I live. I will have a bird next summer, and that will stay all winter."

"George, don't you remember my beautiful cana.

"Well, I don't see as we can love anything. Dear little brother died before the bird, and I loved him better than any bird, or tree or flower. O, I wish we could have something to love that wouldn't die."

The day passed. During the school hours, George and Mary had almost forgotten that their tree was dying; but at evening, as they drew their chairs to the table where their mother was sitting, and began to arrange the seeds they had been gathering, the remembrance of the tree came upon them. " Mother," said Mary, " you may give these seeds

If I could find some seeds of a tree that would never fade, I should like then to have a garden. I wonder, mother, if there ever was such a garden ?"

"Yes, George, I have read of a garden where the trees never die. " A real garden, mother ?"

"Yes, my son. In the middle of the garden, I have been told, there runs a river of pure water, clear as crystal, and on each side of the river is the tree of life-a tree that never fades. That garden' is heaven. There you may love, and love forever -There will be no death-no fading there. Let your treasure be in the tree of life, and you will have something to which your hearts can cling without fear and without disappointment. Love the Saviour here, and he will prepare you to dwell in those green pastures and besides those still waters."

The last Fish Story.

We don't know who wrote the following melancholy and heart-rending tale, but the author is cer. tainly a man of rare faculties: The following thrilling account is said to have been taken from the log book of a vessel some time since arrived in port. In course of the voyage, that dreadful diseasa ship fever, broke out among the crew. One of the sailors, among the first victims, was accompanied by his son, a lad of fourteen years, who was strongly attached to his father, and remained with him day and night, and never could be persuaded to leave his ick father for a moment. A large shark was seen every day following the vessel, evidently for the purpose of devouring any one who should die and be committed to the deep.

After lingering a few days, the sailor died. As it was the custom at sea, he was sowed up in a sheet. and for the purpose of sinking him, an old grind. stone and a carpenter's axe were put in with him.-The very impressive service of the Episcopal Church was then read, and the body committed to the deep. The poor boy who had watched the proceedings closely, plunged in after his father, when the enormous shark swallowed them both. The second day after this dreadful scene, as the shark continued to follow the vessel, (for there were others sick on the ship,) one of the sailors proposed as they had a sharp hook on board, to make an effort to take him.

They fastened the hook to a large rope and baited it with a piece of pork, threw it into the sea, and the shark instantly swallowed it. Having thus hooked him, by means of a windlass they hoisted him on board. After he was dead, they prepared to open him, when one of the sailors stooping down for that purpose suddenly paused, and after listening a few moments, declared most solemnly he heard a from the shark. The sailors, after enjoying a hearty laugh at his expense, proceeded to listen for themen the shark, when the mystery was explained It appears the sailor was not dead, but in a trance:

and his son, on making this discovery, had, by means of his knife, ripped open the sheet. Having turning, the father was holding on to the old ship ed the noise heard by the sailors. As it was the ring where they were at work, they were both sweating tremendously.

> EFFECTS OF RAILROADS.—It will be seen from the annexed paragraph, from the Louisville Journal, that the State of Kentucky begins to feel the vivifying effects of railroads upon its growth, business and wealth. The Journal says:

> "In 1848 Louisville had not a single railroad running into her. Since then she has raised $800,000 for the building of the Louisville and Franklin Rail Road, has subscribed $200,000 to the Jeffersonville and Columbus Co., $1,000,000 to the Louisville and Frankfort Company to enable them to build a branch-road to Knoxville. The value of the property in Louisville, in 1848, when she entered upon the grand scheme of railroad building, was a little over $16.000,000: now, after five years only, it is a little less than $30,000,000, and the city was never increasing more rapidly in population, and never exhibited more evidence of general prosperity."

> recent lecture in London, the garden will exceed anything of the kind conceived in modern times. In order to give some idea of the extent of the gardening operations, the lecturer stated that 50,000 scarlet geraniums had been orderered for next year's planting. These would be required for the Italian terraces that were laid out. The old glass fountain had been preserved, but it would be placed outside, and greatly extended in height. Passing on from the fountain down the slope, he described the succession of waterfalls, which were made, from a distance, to look like one, as seen, on a smaller scale, at Chatsworth. Then came the lakes, with their innumerable jets, surrounded with walks and green slopes, the latter being sufficiently extensive to allow 200,000 to recline at their ease and watch the effect of the fountains; and a little further on was the terminating basin, in which there would be 100 jets. The water to supply the fountains was obtained from an artesian well, from which it was forced to a large reservoir at the higher part of the ground, and smaller ones on the tops of the towers From these elevations it would have a force equal to the delivery of 200 gallons per second. In another part of the ground there was a mound, surmounted by a beautiful temple, entirely formed of trellices covered with roses. Many thousands of persons could stand upon the top of this mound, and enjoy the charming vistas it was intended to command.

> POLITICALLY DAMNED. - Mr. Vicker, Yankee Mack, 'Commedian to the born Republicans," related the following good story to us during his stay in this city. It will serve to give some idea of the "principal ingredients" of success in political life away down south. It will be remembered by many persons about this neighborhood that McG., an Alabama marshal, arrived at Cleaveland about two years ago, in search of a fugitive from justice. He put up at the Weddel teras, run afoul of something, (supposed to be the sunken House, and, during his stay there, he had a "difficult wreck of the Schr. A SPROULAR STORY.—The Paris Constitutional of a late date, says that the following statement has been confirmed by letters both from Constantificial and Schumla. An European physician with atrived some months back at Constantinoule, obtained by dint of solicitation the direction of the military hospital at Schumla. It appears that Omer Pacha soon perceived that this person kept up mysterious relations with Russian spies, and in consequence he kept on his guard. Soon after, being warned that there was an intention to poison him, he feigned to be indisposed. intention to poison him, he feigned to be indisposed, and sent for the medical man in question to attend him. This person, after examining the patient, went out, to prepare a calming potion, which, on his return, he presented to Omer Paoha to drink. The generalin-chief of the Turkish army requested the physician to taste it first himself, and, as the other refused to do so, he forced him to drink the whole of it in his presence. Seeing that the physician then wanted to hurry out, he forced him to remain in the tent, in order that he might judge of the effect of the potion. At the end of some hours the physician died from poison. We publish the fact such as it is related to us in our private letters.

The California popular vote will this year reach 80,000. The city of San Francisco polls 10,113 votes, being an increase of 2127 votes since the Presidential election, when it stood 7986. The vote in the rural districts of the county has risen in the same time from 430 to 826. The vote in the city of Sacramento reaches 5536 now, against 4998 at the Presidential election. Marysville polls 1807 votes. Stockton 1472, and Nevada city 1098.

negroes; is—wonderful. The epistle is one of the most extraordinary we have ever read; and suggests a thousand reflections, which each reader can make for himself.

Henry Clay and the Hon. R. M. Johnson both bear testimony to the high character of T. H. Shelby, and others, from Kentucky, who bear testimony to the wonderful cures by HAMPTON'S VEGETABLE TINCTURE. After speaking of his negro boy, who had the Scrofula, one eye nearly gone, hard lump on side of his neck, health entirely deranged, &c., he was entirely restored to sight and health by this Tincture, and after giving several other remarkable ires he proceeds:
"I also state that my daughter, twelve years of age, was n extremely delicate health for two years, attended with loss of appetite, pale and emaciated. The use of Hampton's acture in one month restored her appetite and she is now I further state that my son has been in bad health for several years, having all the symptoms of dyspepsia, acid stomach, weak digestion, torpid state of the bowels, with great debility. The use of Hampton's Tincture has great-ly improved his health, and he has now the appearance of becoming strong and healthy.

Everybody knows, that when a new administration comes into power, it aims to commit the execution of its policy to subordinates of the the same political views with itself, who may be reasonably expected to feel a more zealous interest in its successful working than those politically inimical to it. Right or wrong, such is the system, and we presume will continue so to be. So much may fairly be taken for granted, and of this, Collector Bronson was of course aware. Further: Ev- that things are getting worse for Turkey every day; erybody remembers the tremer dous sectional agitation, which, a very few years ago disturbed the country from one end to the other, threatening even the perpetuity of the Union itself. At length, scheme of adjustment, known in the aggregate as "the compromise," was agreed upon and enacted by Congress. This was to be a finality. Upon it. as such, the Baltimore Democratic Convention settled down, and upon the platform of that Convention, the Democratic party united, and its nominee, Gen. Pierce, was elected by the party so united. It was understood that this distracting question of slavery should not be re-opened. That in making appointments, the compromise and the Baltimore platform should be the test among Democrats, and nobody looked to a Democratic administration to appoint Whigs. Such being the facts of the case. t does certainly appear evident, that any attempt to go behind the record, and institute distinctions might be, the very existence of the Union itself. Regarded in this plain, common-sense light, it will be at once perceived that Secretary Guthrie's letter to the Collector at New York simply presses upon the attention of that functionary the impropriety of allowing the action of Government officers, in making appointments, to be influenced by sectional difficulties, which it is to the interest of the country to consider settled by the compromise, which compromise the administration stands pledged to recognize and support. In fact, what guarantee could we have for the sincerity of any professions in favor of the Union and of the compromise as a finality, if the admini-tration making such professions allowed invidious distinctions to be made on account of matters anterior to the compromise, and said to be finally settled by it?

The Elections in Georgia, Pennsylvania and Ohio The Grand Fuss.

The Washington Union, in a recent article, made a remark which experience and reason alike justify. namely-that the first six months of any new administration is the time of its greatest weakness and most severe trial; for it is in that time that it is called upon to disappoint the hopes of the greatest number of reckless aspirants. prove its disconnection with petty factions, and set at defiance all threats of opposition made for the purpose of shaping its policy to the views of the threateners. A triumph. then, when it has to crush treachery in its own party, as well as combat opposition in the other, is a triumph indeed; and such has been, and is now the position of President Pierce. What covert and what open attacks have been made upon him and his Cabinet we all know. It has not been from New York alone that the voice of the disaffected has come. It has come in a general way. It will always come, when, as there will always be, there are a number of earnest and enthusiastic patriots who are in great " fear and trembling" for the safety of the country, and are deeply conscious that their services are absolutely necessary to preserve it from destruction; for there will be differences of opinion, and the administration may not perceive the same necessity, and, of course, the administration deserves a sound abusing for its stupidity, which it certainly gets from the earnest and enthusiastic patriots. General Pierce's administration has been guilty in this very way, and it has been abused in this very way, and we have been gravely told that it has sunk, Lord knows how much, and that the party is broken into very minute scraps; when, marvellous to relate, the Fall elections come, and the Democrats carry Georgia, Granicular Syrup. Andrew Johnson, who has just been elected Govhe State, Major Henry, whose oratorical gifts are hardly second to those of any other gentleman in the Union,) is an extraordinary man. Indeed, there is more in his history to encourage probity. industry, energy, and ambition in the youth of America of all degrees, says the Washington Star, than in that of any other public man we know of. At two years of age Mr. Johnson was (we learn from those in whose knowledge of his early history we place every confidence) an inmate of the almshouse of Wake county, North Carolina, where he remained until his eighth year, when he was apprenticed to a tailor in Raleigh. His master, if he ailed to have taught him even the rudiments of an English education, at least trained him up to love he truth, work hard, and be straightforward in his dealings with every one. When his apprenticeship was up, Mr. Johnson married a woman after his own hear, who knew enough from books to be able to aid am in mastering the arts of reading and

" Must I tell your worship? Why, then, I was taking Nelly Callaham over Schuykill lest Sunday, that led to the whole calamity. The old scratch instigated me to kiss her among the blackberry bushes, and she fit against the civility till her straw bonnet was used up like a crushed egg shell." "There," says she, "you've ruined me!"

" How's that ?" says 1. "Why," says she, "you've kissed the head off of me, and soiled my best bonnet besides, and if that's not ruination, I'd like to know what is." "Never mind," says I, "there's not much done yet; and I'll pay all damages." "If you don't get me another bonnet, you villain, says she, "I'll sue you for high trayson.' And so your honor. I was obliged to do it." Todo what ?" "Get her another bonnet. There was no shying

"What a curious sensation that is which troubles man upon such a mission? Why does the elegantly arranged sentence, studied with so much care, in order to avoid formality and familiarity, begin to seem bald, and bold, and bungling, just as it is about to be wanted? Why is it finally revised upon the coarse mat in the hall, and utterly rejected upon the silky mat on the landing? Why do you feel choking, as with thirst, and yet could not drink in the other. But, upon reflection, I did, after a the elixir of life if it were presented to you? Why would you pay a hundred guineas a step to have the Post Master, and through the carelessness of lation?
